

What to Do in the Heavy Snow Storm of 2014

The north-eastern US has been hit by a major winter storm, with 53cm (21 inches) of snowfall recorded in one town in Massachusetts. The storm brings heavy snow to the Great Lakes and Ohio Valley and freezing rain from the Deep South, along the Appalachians into New England. The governors of New York and New Jersey declared a state of emergency and urged residents to stay indoors as a major storm hit the northeastern United States on Thursday, bringing heavy snow and delaying or canceling thousands of flights. "Please, starting this evening, stay indoors to the maximum extent possible," de Blasio asked. "Stay out of your cars to the maximum extent possible. If you don't need to go out, don't go out."
